PREFACE.

1. In the Advertisement to the English and Carnátaca Dictionary it was intimated that the present undertaking had been commenced as far back as the year 1817, and its progress suspended in consequence of domestic affliction, obliging the Author to embark for Europe. In 1827, the Author having been permitted, by Divine Providence, to return to India for a few years, the present work was resumed and has been prosecuted with all practicable expedition, till brought to its conclusion about two years since; when, having successfully passed through the usual ordeal of examination, and having been favourably reported on by the College Board of Fort St. George, the copy-right was purchased by Government and the work ordered to be printed at the Government Gazette Press, whence it is now issued.

2. The Authors referred to in the Advertisement to the English and Carnátaca Dictionary, as having afforded material assistance in the compiling of that work, have been made free use of, as occasion served, in carrying on the present undertaking, and, as is becoming, the Author's grateful acknowledgments are here repeated. Indeed, in the Sanscrit department of the present work, the chief of what is valuable has been derived from Wilson's Sanscrit Dictionary, though it contains a very large collection of words, in this language, which have never before appeared in print: for these the Author holds himself solely responsible.

3. The affinity between the Teloogoo and Carnátaca languages is so great that, frequently, it is only necessary to change an initial or an inflection to make the correspondence complete: therefore where the definitions in Campbell's Teloogoo Dictionary, appeared full and accurate, the Author has, in such cases, adopted them into his own work, with little or no alteration; as it appeared to him to savour less of utility than of pedantry to do otherwise.

4. In the class of foreign terms marked H, the author is aware that the specification is not sufficiently distinct, but he had not the means or information requisite for exact precision in reference to all these derivations; they are chiefly used in the Revenue Department; some of them are of doubtful origin and not to be met with in any lexicon: and ascertaining correctly the meaning of them seemed to be more important than tracing exactly their derivation.

5. The Author had prepared a large collection of quotations from native classical writers with a view of enriching his work thereby, and as authorities for words of rare occurrence in the common or colloquial language; but, in order to prevent his work from being inconveniently large, this part of his original plan he found it necessary to abandon: merely retaining a few of them and inserting fragments of others.

6. In compiling the Carnátaca and English Dictionary, the Author has had to encounter the difficulties usually incident to all first undertakings of this character; and for the defects and deficiencies which may be discovered in his work, he claims, from the public, the indulgence and forbearance which may be due on the ground of such considerations. The rareness of ancient manuscripts; the endless blunders of drivelling and hireling transcribers; the paucity of duplicates for collocation; and the comparatively very small number of men to be found among the natives possessing appropriate philological information, soundness of judgment, or zeal for literary research and general improvement, are all obstacles which the Author has had to encounter in their full force, and which have occasioned no inconsiderable suspense, annoyance, and embarrassment; and though, by drudgery and perseverance, he has surmounted them in some way or other, he cannot entertain the hope that he has done so, in every instance, with complete success. In a few cases, the existing doubt has been expressed by a mark of interrogation; in others, where discrepancies prevailed in the authorities consulted, the words have either been rescinded altogether or those meanings have been attached to them which the majority of opinions favoured.

7. The method adopted in collecting and arranging the materials of which the present work is composed has been briefly as follows. Two clever men were employed in culling from the Amera Cosha and other Sanscrit vocabularies such terms as are current among classical writers on science and mythology; two in writing on the margins of the Teloogoo and Tamil Dictionaries corresponding Carnátaca words; two in the collection, under appropriate heads, of radicals, synonyms, technicalities, peculiar phrases, proverbs &c. &c. &c. occurring in ancient and modern vocabularies and grammars, or marked down for the purpose in other books, during the progress of a long course of reading. The names of the articles of trade and commerce, and those of the implements of husbandry, the tools and apparatuses of mechanics and artists, and the fruits, flowers, grains, &c. &c. cultivated by gardeners and farmers, were obtained by securing, in succession, the attendance of a person, tolerably informed, from each of these trades or callings.

8. In giving, at one view, the power of the several letters of the Carnátaca alphabet, in the Roman character, as exhibited on the sheet facing the first page of the Dictionary, considerable difficulty was experienced. Many of them, after all, are very far from being perfectly correct representations of the original characters, the sounds of which, in several instances, are such as it is impossible correctly to convey by any combination of the Roman alphabet. The exact sound of them can be acquired alone by the ear and the voice of the living teacher. There are, however, twelve letters concerning which much trouble may be saved by bearing in mind that six of them ; viz. ತ, ಥ, ದ, ಧ, ನ, and ಲ, are articulated by the tip of the tongue being made to protrude, in an easy manner almost through the teeth ; and six, viz. ಟ, ಠ, ಡ, ಢ, ಣ, and ಳ, are pronounced by curving back the tongue and forcibly striking the under part of it against the roof of the mouth.

9. The general plan of the present work has been, to introduce the roots of all the Carnátaca verbs that could be collected, and to put under them, with some exceptions, their compound, causal, relative, and participal forms. These roots, though translated with to, the sign of the English infinitive, it is to be recollected are never used in the sense of the infinitive, but only in that of the imperative. In addition to the radicals, and such ramifications of them as are abovementioned, there will be found, in their appropriate places, the generality of words belonging to the other usual forms of speech ; such as the noun, pronoun, adjective, adverb, and interjection. For any information which may be required in reference to their formation, application, construction, and government, the reader is referred to the Author's remarks in the Introduction to his English and Carnátaca Dictionary, p. 35 to 48.

10. Among the numerous names of the deities, of rivers, mountains, cities, and other noted places, so many have been inserted as seemed necessary for the elucidation of the Hindoo mythology and a general acquaintance with popular opinions and customs. Compound terms, which can be formed to almost any extent, and which are extremely useful, have been admitted when very common according to their alphabetical order ; in other instances they must be sought for under the separate members composing them. The same remark will apply to abstract nouns, which may be made ad libitum by the addition to the concrete terms of ತ್ವ in Sanscrit, and ತನ in Carnátaca.

11. Where proverbs and common sayings have been introduced, for the sake of illustration, or as authority for the meaning given to words under which they are placed, the translation, in cases allowable, has been given literally, in others, where there was no alternative, a free rendering was preferred, and in a third class both modes have been united, the latter in immediate succession and the former in a parenthesis.

12. From long usage, the general decay of learning, and other circumstances, the adoption of most of the vowels, as initials, has fallen into great disrepute and disuse, so that they rarely occur in their disembodied or initial forms, except in ancient authors, classical works, or in manuscripts cautiously and carefully written; still, instead of departing from the original principles and laws of the language, it appeared to the Author, that in compiling a standard work of reference like that of a Dictionary, it was better to aim at reform than to countenance and perpetuate innovation and corruption; therefore where words cannot be found under ಯಿ, ಯೀ, ವೂ, ಯೆ, ಯೇ, ವೊ, ವೋ, &c. &c. they must be sought under those of which these are either vulgar or compound forms, viz. ಇ, ಈ, ಉ, ಊ, ಎ, ಏ, ಒ, ಓ, &c. &c. To facilitate reference, however, as well as to save time, merely a few of the corrupt forms of spelling have been admitted, under the designation of ಗ್ರಾಮ್ಯ.

13. Through the interchangeableness of many of the letters, local custom, and perhaps arbitrary practice, synonyms are apparently multiplied to a needless extent, and the bulk of the work thereby greatly increased; but for this evil there appeared no adequate remedy, consequently most of the varieties of orthography sanctioned by the general usage of society have been admitted. For an account of these interchangeable letters, see Introduction to the English and Carnátaca Dictionary, p. 12 to 16.

14. The law of admission or exclusion in reference to Sanscrit words has been, the frequency or rareness of their occurrence in the transaction of business, scientific inquiries, biblical or ethical studies, social intercourse, and standard Carnátaca works.

15. Where the corrupted form of a word occurs, the meaning is frequently given very briefly, but the fuller and more lengthened explanation will be found attached to the word whence its derivation is traced.

16. The Compiler's authorities for the meanings attached to words derived from the ancient dialect are, chiefly, several celebrated and rare vocabularies &c. particularly those designated ಚತುರಾಸ್ಯ, ಕಬ್ಬಿಗರ ಕೈಪಿಡಿ, ಶಬ್ದಮಣಿದರ್ಪಣಂ, ಕರ್ನಾಟಕವ್ಯಾಕರಣಂ, ಶಬ್ದಮಂಜರಿ, &c. &c. &c. supported, in many instances, by the known use of them among writers and poets distinguished for their genius, learning, and accuracy.

17. In the various senses given to a number of terms, it is to be borne in mind that some of them are literal and some figurative, some of them current in one part of the country, and some of them peculiar to others, some common only to certain castes, some technical, and some conventional. On these accounts, by a few individuals, many of the meanings will be contested and denied, whilst others will attribute senses to them and make applications of them which the Dictionary does not contain.

18. Where there is a confluence or intermixture of languages, as at Bellary and Bangalore, both large military stations, many words will imperceptibly and unavoidably creep into a language from foreign sources which did not originally belong to it, and in such places their adoption has become so common and is of such long continuance, that they may be said to be almost naturalized; and therefore to have excluded them would have made the Dictionary defective, and might have occasioned inconvenience and embarrassment. On the other hand, as the Author has never had an opportunity of enjoying the advantages, which might have accrued to his work from a residence in the Naggery, Harponelly, and other districts, where Canarese is purely spoken, with little if any foreign admixtures, he fears that many words there current will not be found in the Dictionary; nor ought it to be expected that all the words occurring in old authors will be met with here: for to accomplish this object satisfactorily many more years of patient investigation would be absolutely necessary.

19. From the labour bestowed and the accumulations made the Author cheers himself with the hope that by far the larger proportion of words, both rare and common, has been collected. Should those who consult the work note down and communicate to the Author any errors or deficiencies which may be suggested by their studies, researches, observations, or experience, they will be performing a most acceptable service, and hereby furnish important materials either for the formation of a supplement or the emendation and improvement of a future edition.

20. If in tracing the derivation of words and clearing up doubtful points the Author's labours have been crowned with any measure of success, he has to attribute that success, in a very material degree, to the philological acquirements, sound judgment, and nice discrimination, possessed by Krishnāchāree, for some years a Sanscrit pupil, and more recently a law-student in the College of Fort St. George. This respectable individual is decidedly the best informed and the most correct Canarese scholar the Author has ever met with, and to his most valuable and very kind services, for several years, he feels himself greatly indebted.

21. The Author having made these observations now ventures to send forth his work to the world, hoping, as far as its claims may justify, that it will meet with a favourable reception. He feels himself devoutly thankful to Almighty God who has spared his life and vouchsafed needful health and strength to bring to its conclusion a task which has been at all times most laborious and not unfrequently extremely insipid, unprofitable, and irksome. It originated, as formerly stated, in the Author's own necessities, when first sitting down to the study of the language. It has been prosecuted with long and frequent interruptions, and in connexion with many other weighty engagements. The motives which have incited and sustained perseverance to the end have been, partly the prospect of usefulness and advantage to the public service, but chiefly that of furnishing facilities for promoting and expediting the mental and spiritual improvement, and the present and everlasting happiness of those many thousands of immortal beings amongst whom the Carnátaca language is vernacular.

s. ಅಂಬ s. n. 1. Párvutee the mother of the world. 2. a mother.

c. ಅಂಬ present relative participle from ಎನ್ನು to say. It is used, as a provincialism, instead of ಎಂಬ q. v. and also as the third person sing. of the indicative mood past tense, present, and future; as, ನಾನು ಹೇಳು ಮಾತಿಗೆ ಅವನೇನಂಬ what will he say to what I mentioned? ನೀ ಹೋಗಂಬ ನೀ ಬಾ ಅಂಬ he says go and he says come. ಅವನಿದು ಮಾಡಬೇಡಂಬ he said you must not do this. ನಾನಾದರೆ ಹೋಗುವೆ ಅವನೇನಂಬನೋ ನಾನರಿಯೆ I will venture to go, but I know not what he will say. ಅಂಬ ಮಾತು word spoken. ನೀನಂಬ ಮಾತಿಗೆಲ್ಲರು ನಗುತ್ತಾರೆ they all laugh at what you say. ಅದೇನಂಬ ಮಾತೆನಗೆ ಹೇಳು tell me what is the meaning of that word. ನೀನಂಬ ದಂ ಎಲ್ಲರಂಬುತ್ತಾರೆ see they all say what you say. ಅಂಬ ಸುದ್ದಿ current news, the common talk. ಆ ಪಟ್ಟಣದಲ್ಲಂಬ ಸುದ್ದಿ ಏನು what is the news stirring in that city? ರಾಣಿಯಂಬಾತೆ the queen. ಅಂಬಾಗ, ಅಂಬಾಗ್ಗೆ, ಅಂಬಾಗ್ಯೆ 1. when said. 2. so to say. 3. if so. The latter two of these terms are used very variously. In translating some sentences in which they occur, if they are left out, altogether, the meaning will be complete. ಇಲ್ಲದ ಮಾತುಗಳಂಬಾಗ್ಗೆ ನಿನಗೆ ಸುಳ್ಳೆಂದು ಬುದ್ಧಿಗಲಿಸುವರು if you say what is not true they will reprove you of falsehood. ಹಾಗಂಬಾಗ್ಗೆ ಅಲ್ಲೀಗ ಯಾರಿದ್ದರೋ were there any persons there when you thus spoke? ಆ ಮನೆಯ ಖರ್ಚು ಇಷ್ಟಂಬಾಗ್ಗೆ ಅಶ್ಚರ್ಯ it is very surprising that the expense of that house should be said to be so much. ಸೇರಕ್ಕಿ ಅಂಬಾಗ್ಗೆ ಸೇವಕನಿಗೆ ಹಾಳಿತವು a seer of rice may be sufficient for a servant.

There is a vast difference between him and you. Again ಎಷ್ಟು prefixed to the past relative participle, or subjunctive form of the verb, expresses whatsoever, how-much soever, how many soever; as, ನೀನೆಷ್ಟುಹೇಳಿದರೂಅವನುಮಾಡನು how much soever you say he will not do it. ನಾನೆಷ್ಟು ಪ್ರಯಾಸಪಟ್ಟರೂಅದುಆಗದು it cannot be effected howmuch soever I labour. This is a most common reply to a question ; and as it denotes either ignorance or doubt, its precise meaning must be gathered from the context, and the manner of the speaker. It is as often the subterfuge of a prevaricating witness, unwilling to declare the truth, as the blunt profession of ignorance on the part of an honest clown. ಮತ್ತೇನು what else ? what more ? what farther ? ಏನಾಯಿತು what has happened ? what is the matter ? what has become of it ? what is done ? ಏನೆಂದರೆ lit. what if you say. This is an expression very commonly used when the words of another person are about to be repeated, and answers to the English phrases. Thus, as follows, viz. because, for. ಅದೇನಂದರೆ that is thus. ಅವನು ಹೇಳುವದೇನಂದರೆ he says as follows. ನಾನು ಹೇಳುವದೇನಂದರೆ what I say is this. ನೀನು ಮಾಡಬೇಕಾದ್ದೇನಂದರೆ what you must do is this. ಏನಾದರು any thing, any thing whatsoever. ಏನಾದರೂ ಹೇಳು, ಏನಾದರೂ ಹೇಳು say something or another. ಏನಾದರು ಮಾಡು do something. ಏನು and ಏನೋ followed by a negative of any kind, respectively, denote nothing, and not even the least thing ; or the most trifling thing ; as, ಏನುಯಿಲ್ಲ nothing. ಏನೂಯಿಲ್ಲ not even the least. ಅಲ್ಲೇನುಯಿಲ್ಲ there is nothing there. ಅವನೇನು ಮಾಡದನು he did nothing. ಏನೂ ಮಾಡನು he will not do even the most trifling thing. ಅವನೇನರಿಯನು he knows nothing. ಏನರಿಯುವ one who knows nothing. ಏನಂತಿ what do you say ? ಏನಂದ what is it he says ? ಏನು ಮಾಡಲಿ, ಏಂಗೈಯ್ಯಲಿ what shall I do ? ನಾನೇನು ಹೇಳಿದರೂ ಅವನು ಕೇಳನು how much soever I say he will not pay attention. ಅವನು ಹಾಂಗೆ ಹೇಳುವದೇನು why did he say so ? ಏನು ಕಾರಣ on what account ? why ? what for ? ಏನಹೇಳ್ಲಿ, ಏನು ಹೇಳುವೆ, ಏನೆಂಬೆ what shall I say ? ಏನಮೆ, ಏನಸೆ, ಏನ್ನೈ, ಏನಲಾ what ? (when speaking to a male inferior). ಏನೆ, ಏನವೆ what ? (when addressing a female). ಏನಹದು, ಏನಹುದು, ಏನಪ್ಪುದು ಏನಾಗುವದು what can, or will be ? ಏನಾಗದು, ಏನೂ ಆಗದು nothing can be done. ಏನಿದು what is this ? ಏನದೆ, ಏನಿದೆ what is there ? ಏನ್ಕೆಸು what ? ಏಂಗೈದರು what did they ?

ಓ The fourteenth vowel of the Alphabet corresponding to o long, which, prefixed to all vocatives, answers to the English interjection oh!; as, ಓರಾಮಾ oh! Rama. ಓತಾಯೆ oh! mother. The connected form of this vowel affixed to the last word of a sentence, or to a single word alone, denotes ignorance or doubt; as, ನೀನೋ ಅವನೋ I know not whether it is he or you. When it is added to the conditional form of the verb ending in ರೆ, then it represents the English phrases, but, if, on the contrary; thus, ಮಳೆ ಸುರಿಯದಿದ್ದರೆ or ಮಳೆ ಸುರಿಯದೆಹೋದರೆ ಜನರು ನರಳುವರು, ಮಳೆ ಸುರಿದರೆಯೋ ಜನರು ಸುಖಪಡುವರು if it do not rain the people will suffer severely, but if it rain, they will be happy.

c. రావకట్టిగె s. n. A stick with an iron point, used to guide or goad an elephant.

s. రావణ s. n. The sovereign of Lunku or Ceylon, who having obtained (for his devotion) a promise from Brumha, that he should not suffer death by any of the usual means, became the tyrant and pest of mankind. Vishnoo in his seventh incarnation, under the name of రామచంద్ర, descended to destroy him. The gods came with him in the shape of monkeys, as రావణ had gained no promise of safety from them; hence హనుమంత was Rāmu's general. Rāmuchundru's mother's name was కౌసల్యె. His younger brother భరత was son of కైకయి, who was the cause of Rāmu's going to the desert దండకారణ్య to perform devotions, insisting that her son should reign the 14 years that Rāmu was so employed. It was during his stay in the forests, in company with లక్ష్మణ (his brother by సుమిత్రె) that రావణ appeared as a beggar, while he was absent hunting, and enticed away సీతె: which gave rise to the war detailed in the రామాయణ. సీతె was daughter of జనక రాజ, who had promised to give her to any person who could break a certain bow, which was done by రామచంద్ర. When in the forest he drew a circle round సీతె, and forbad her to go beyond it, and left లక్ష్మణ to take care of her; but లక్ష్మణ hearing some noise which alarmed him for his brother, left her to seek him; then it was that రావణ appeared and enticed her out of the circle, and carried her off in his flying chariot. In the air he was opposed by the bird జటాయు, whose wings he cut and escaped. రావణారి Rāmu, enemy of Rāvunu. రావణి Rāvunu's son. రావణ హొట్టె gluttony, a voracious appetite.
